Brian Bowen will not play at the University of Louisville. He may remain on scholarship but will not be allowed to practice or compete

Bowen Will Not Play at the University of Louisville

LOUISVILLE, Ky. -- The University of Louisville has informed men's basketball student-athlete Brian Bowen that it will provide him written permission, per NCAA Bylaw 13.1.1.3, to contact another collegiate institutions if he wishes to transfer. If he remains at the institution, he can continue to receive his athletics scholarship but he will not be allowed to practice with or compete for the institution's men's basketball team at any point in the future.

"Brian has been a responsible young man for the institution since he enrolled," said UofL Interim Director of Athletics Vince Tyra. "He has endeared himself to his teammates and the men's basketball staff with a positive attitude during a very difficult period."

The University will have no further comment on this matter.
